

Kindness, Compassion, Rejoicing and Serenity

A Meditation Retreat led by Smritiratna and Śraddhādhārani

About the Retreat

In Buddhism, the four love meditations are known as the brahma vihāras or 'sublime abidings'. These meditations cultivate kindness (mettā bhāvanā), compassion (karunā bhāvanā), appreciative joy (muditā bhāvanā) and serenity (upekkhā bhāvanā). In a way they are a meditative preparation for real life - our encounters with real human beings in the midst of their joys and sorrows.

The four meditations culminate in upekkhā bhāvanā which is a contemplation of the human condition, how everyone is embodied within a flow of conditions and continually making the choices that create their future.

On the retreat we can get familiar with the whole range of emotions that human encounters tend to stir in us, from envy and resentment to anxiety, pity and gloom to craving, anger and possessiveness. All through, our ideal will be to access our innate humanity and respond from that deeper level.

Our approach is to introduce each of the brahma vihāras in a simplified three-stage form initially and then the longer version after we've had some practice. The meditations start and finish with T.A.R.A: that Tender All-Receiving Awareness which forms the foundation of mindfulness, the receptive awareness which underlies all other meditations and is the basis of love itself.

Is there anything special I need to bring?

Bring whatever you need for comfortable meditation - loose clothes for example. And bring a full set of waterproofs (jacket and trousers) and boots so you can roam about in the beautiful surroundings whatever the Scottish weather - often very cold and often wet at this time of year. So plenty of layers and thermal underwear would be a useful extra.

What can you expect from the programme?

The retreat day starts at 6.30am with a rising bell then a meditation at 7.00. There'll be up to six meditation sittings a day, each lasting about 40 minutes. Each day there'll also be one or two short explanatory talks and the day will end with Buddhist devotional practice - puja or mantra.

There will be long periods of silence on the retreat so we can attend more fully to immediate experience. Saturday night until Thursday afternoon will be without conversation except for teachings and 1:1 practice reviews. Then we leave the next day, Friday.

About the retreat team

Smritiratna and Śraddhādhārani have been meditating regularly for many years and both have led a number of retreats. With help from the team they will be teaching the meditations and offering regular mentoring through 1:1 practice reviews.
